Has a friend or family member ever told you about a teacher who made a lasting impact on their child? For many, the answer is yes. And one common theme: That teacher

Caring teachers help students feel seen, understood and respected. They value students' differences. They connect with students' families and community members. In short, they are master relationship builders.

The Best Teachers Connect with S

Pat Sandos, Superintendent of Sheridan School District, says the teachers who perform well in his district are the ones who build strong relationships. "We need teachers who can connect with students and their families," he says. Sandos. "The best teachers are culturally competent and able to understand the stories of students and their families," he
